Edgeworth is a leader in evaluating complex labor and employment issues as testifiers and consultants. Our experts are well-known for developing a thorough understanding of our clients' unique challenges and applying tailored, innovative approaches to rigorously analyze the issues. Our team combines intellectual insight; expertise in labor economics, econometrics, and statistics; practical experience; and the firm's vast data capabilities to provide exceptional analysis in a wide range of labor and employment cases.

Our economists have been retained to offer their expertise, both as testifiers and consultants, on a variety of labor and employment topics, including:

- Class certification
- Gender, race, ethnicity, and age discrimination claims relating to pay, promotions, hiring, and terminations
- Wage and hours litigation under FLSA and state specific laws
- Claims arising from no-poaching agreements
- Agency investigations
- Damages and exposure analyses
- Pay equity audits
- Diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI) initiatives
- Criminal background checks
- Compliance audits
- Reduction-in-force (RIF) analyses
- Single-plaintiff claims
- Collective bargaining negotiations
- Americans with Disabilities Act cases

Throughout the lifespan of these projects, Edgeworth routinely extracts, synthesizes, and analyzes extensive amounts of information from complex and varied employment databases. Our rigorous approach and data analysis capabilities ensure that our conclusions in both litigation and consulting stand up to close scrutiny and real-world application.
