With deep expertise analyzing data and testifying about Antitrust and Labor and Employment issues, Edgeworth experts are uniquely positioned to provide accurate and compelling analyses in no-poaching litigation.

We draw on unparalleled experience analyzing compensation and hiring through firm-level labor and employment transactional data, including applicant tracking data, human resources data covering job history, performance, and other aspects of employment experience, as well as external labor market data sources. Our experts leverage this experience to empirically analyze whether patterns of data are consistent or inconsistent with the constrained movement between firms and the associated wage suppression alleged to result from no-poaching arrangements.
